Questions 1-5: Read the excerpt from Trills and Thrills: Birdwatching in India and answer the questions that follow. (5×1=5)

We reached Parambikulam just as it was getting dark. In the verandah of the forest bungalow, I found a large group of Kadar adivasis, and in their midst, a bare-footed 'topless' European male in crumpled khaki shorts.

We soon introduced ourselves. He was an Austrian anthropologist, Baron Omar Rolf. He claimed ornithology to be his second love and expressed great keenness on accompanying me the next morning. Led by a forest guard, we were stalking along a narrow animal trail through dense tall grassland above five feet high – the right kind of habitat for the Broad-tailed Grass Warbler.

Upon turning a bend in the path, the forest guard suddenly ducked, excitedly pointing in front. I just glimpsed the head of a tusker striding down the same path from the opposite direction, and turned to flee as fast as I could, motioning to Omar, who was ten yards behind me, to do likewise.

1. Who did Dr. Salim Ali meet in the forest bungalow?
2. What did the narrator do when he saw the tusker?
3. What does the narrator's and Omar's reaction to the tusker suggest about the wild?

   B. The unpredictability and danger of the wild
   C. The need for exploration in the wild

She rewards me with tears and an agitation of hands.
I am important to her. She comes and goes.

Rises toward her day after day, like a terrible fish.

Robotics is the branch of science and technology that deals with the design, construction, and operation of robots. A robot is a machine that can perform tasks automatically, often with the help of computer programming. Robots are designed to make human life easier, safer, and more efficient.

The field of robotics combines knowledge from mechanics, electronics, computer science, and artificial intelligence. Some robots are controlled by humans and they act according to the instructions given, while others are autonomous, meaning they can make decisions on their own using sensors and software. Robots are utilised in various aspects of our daily lives. In factories, industrial robots assemble cars and electronic devices with great precision. In medicine, robotic arms assist doctors in performing delicate surgeries. Robots are also used in space exploration, underwater research, and disaster management.

In recent years, humanoid robots, machines that resemble and behave like humans, have gained popularity. Educational robots are used to teach programming and problem-solving skills to students. Robotics continues to grow rapidly, shaping the future of work and learning. As technology advances, robots will become even more intelligent and helpful.
