Questions 12-15: Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow. (4×1=4)

The Changing Faces of Generations

Each generation reflects the world in which it grows up. Generation X (roughly those born between 1965 and 1980) are often described as self-reliant, practical, and adaptable. They experienced the advent of personal computers and cable television, which made them comfortable with technology while maintaining traditional work ethics. Many grew up as 'latchkey kids,' returning to empty homes after school, which made them independent and resourceful. However, Gen X face challenges such as financial insecurity and balancing care for aging parents and children. Generation Z

(those born between 1997 and 2012) are true digital natives who have never known life without smartphones or the internet. They value authenticity, inclusivity, and mental health awareness. Gen Z tends to communicate through visuals, emojis, and short-form videos, reflecting fast-paced thinking and creativity. Their flexible approach to learning and work makes them open to change, though constant online exposure can lead to anxiety and shorter attention spans. Generation Alpha (born from around 2010 to 2024) is growing up in a world defined by artificial intelligence, social media, and interactive learning. Their education and friendships often happen in digital spaces. These children are expected to be highly tech-skilled but may struggle with face-to-face socialization and screen dependency. Studies suggest that values like sustainability, diversity, and innovation will strongly shape their world-view. Looking ahead, Generation Beta (those born from 2025) is still a future generation. Experts predict that they will grow up with even more advanced technology, including AI companions, global classrooms, and new digital language. While it is too early to predict their character, they are expected to continue the trend of technological immersion and global connectedness that began with Gen Z and Alpha.

D. Generation Beta is already well-defined with clear characteristics and limitations.

He pretends he can't hear her
Starts to whistle as he crosses the street
Seems embarrassed to be there.
Oh, think twice, cause it's another day for
You and me in paradise.
Oh, think twice, cause it's another day for you,
You and me in paradise,
Think about it.

Mirror

I am silver and exact. I have no preconceptions.
Whatever I see I swallow immediately

I am not cruel, only truthful,
The eye of a little god, four-cornered.
Most of the time I meditate on the opposite wall.
It is pink, with speckles. I have looked at it so long
I think it is part of my heart. But it flickers.
Faces and darkness separate us over and over.

An Introduction

I am an Indian, very brown, born in Malabar,
I speak three languages, write in
Two, dream in one.
Don't write in English, they said, English is
Not your mother-tongue. Why not leave
Me alone, critics, friends, visiting cousins,
Every one of you? Why not let me speak in
Any language I like? The language I speak,
Becomes mine, its distortions, its queernesses
All mine, mine alone.
